SERICULTURE 2016-17

- Sericulture is an agro based industry; It is a systematic study of silkworm rearing for the production of raw silk.
- Moriculture is a process of cultivation and management of mulberry plants. Mulberry leaf constitutes the basic food for the silkworm Bombyx mori.
- Production of nutritionally good quality mulberry leaves depend upon mulberry varieties, soil condition, rain fall, humidity and temperature.
- Mulberry cultivation can be undertaken under irrigation as well as under dry farming conditions.
- There are two systems of mulberry cultivation.
 1. Pit system - In which individual mulberry cutting is planted in a pit with adequate farm yard manure and watering facility.
 2. Row system – In which field is ploughed to produce deep furrows. The individual mulberry cuttings are planted on the ridges of the furrows. This system is followed under irrigation facility.
- Rearing of silkworms: It involves the stepwise caring of the eggs through their larval stages till the production of the cocoons.
- The rearing of silkworms require an optimum temperature ranging between 20 to 28°C and an optimum humidity ranging between 70 to 80% depending on the early or late larval stages.
- Bombyx mori passes through four distinct stages during the life cycle: egg, larva, pupa and adult. There are two races of silkworms in India.
 1. Bivoltine, pass through two generations per year.
 2. Multivoltine pass through more than two generations per year.
- The silkworm passes through five instars after the egg hatching. Scientific methods have been developed for successful rearing of silkworms.
- Cocoons are produced when the 5th instar larva spins with silk thread around itself to undergo pupal stage. Cocoons are made of thread like filament, consisting of two proteins, sericin and fibrion.
- Scientific methods have been developed to process the cocoon to produce the raw silk. The process is called reeling technology.

Annual summary report on certificate course in “ Sericulture” (2016-2017)

The department of Zoology has conducted a certificate course in “ Sericulture” for the students of Zoology at under graduate level to enhance their practical knowledge in the subject in relation to employability. Ten students were enrolled to the course on voluntary interest. Each enrolled student was given brochure, study materials and time-table with incharge faculty. Against the duration of 60 hours (20+40) 52 classes were engaged. APICULTURE 2018-19

- Man has at several occasions proved his intelligence and superior skill by converting the wondrous capabilities of the animal world to his material advantage. One of the finest discoveries in this line is our knowledge regarding the procurement of honey collected by bees. The use of honey was known to man since the earliest of times in India as well as in other parts of the world, because it is a nourishment of high food values.
- Apiculture is the scientific method of rearing honeybees. The word 'apiculture' comes from the Latin word 'Apis' meaning Bee. So, apiculture or beekeeping is the care and management of honey bees for the production of honey and wax.
- Bee keeping has been practiced in India since time immemorial. Scientific bee keeping with the help of simple machine and untouched by hand is a comparatively new venture.
- Honey bee belongs to the class Insecta, order hymenoptera and family apidae. There are five well recognized types of bees found in the world. Apis dorsata (Rock bee), Apis florea (Little bee), Apis indica (Indian bee), Apis mellifera (European bee), Apis adamsoni (African bee).
- Among these five types, three are common in India. They are Apis dorsata, Apis florea, Apis indica. We used Apis cerana indica.
- Honey bees have three castes: drones, workers, and queens. Drones are male, while workers and queens are female.
- Various types of bees make various types of honey combs but their lay out pattern is almost same in all the cases. They have a common partition wall having serially arranged cells on either side. These cells are hexagonal and fragile. The bee may have a separate comb as a brood chamber or may use the same hive as a brood chamber.
- This could be for collecting honey and beeswax, or for pollinating crops. About 85 per cent crops plants are cross-pollinated, and colonies of honeybees, placed in the field when the crop is in flowering stage, can set about the needed pollination; abundance of pollinators helps in early setting of seeds, resulting in early and a more uniform crop yield.
- Beekeeping requires less time, money and infrastructure investments. Honey and beeswax can be produced from an area of little agricultural value. The honey bee does not compete for resources with any other agricultural enterprise. Beekeeping have positive ecological consequences. Bees play an important role in the pollination of many flowering plants, thus increasing the yield of certain crops such as sunflower and various fruits. Honey is a delicious and highly nutritious food. By the traditional method of honey hunting many wild colonies of bees are destroyed. This can be prevented by raising bees in boxes and producing honey at home.
- Enemies of the bees that harm the colony in different ways are the Wax moths, Wasp, black ants, bee's eaters and King crow are common enemies of the honey bees comb and honey.

- Honey is produced by the bee and is of important medicinal value. It contains a variety of minerals e.g., Ca, Fe, Silica, Mg, Mn, K, Cl, S, Al, and phosphorus whereas amino acids, citric, formic, succinic, malic and acetic acids are also present in traces, pigments like Carotene, Xanthone and Anthocyanin and vitamin A, B complex and C are also reported in it. Besides all these enzymes like invertase, diastase are also found.
- Methods of Bee-Keeping: Indigenous methods and Modern method.

APICULTURE 2019-20

- Man has at several occasions proved his intelligence and superior skill by converting the wonderous capabilities of the animal world to his material advantage. One of the finest discoveries in this line is our knowledge regarding the procurement of honey collected by bees. The use of honey was known to man since the earliest of times in India as well as in other parts of the world, because it is a nourishment of high food values.
- Apiculture is the scientific method of rearing honeybees. The word 'apiculture' comes from the Latin word 'Apis' meaning Bee. So, apiculture or beekeeping is the care and management of honey bees for the production of honey and wax.
- Bee keeping has been practiced in India since time immemorial. Scientific bee keeping with the help of simple machine and untouched by hand is a comparatively new venture.
- Honey bee belongs to the class Insecta, order hymenoptera and family apidae. There are five well recognized types of bees found in the world. Apis dorsata (Rock bee), Apis florea (Little bee), Apis indica (Indian bee), Apis mellifera (European bee), Apis adamsoni (African bee).
- Among these five types, three are common in India. They are Apis dorsata, Apis florea, Apis indica. We used Apis cerana indica.
- Honey bees have three castes: drones, workers, and queens. Drones are male, while workers and queens are female.
- Various types of bees make various types of honey combs but their lay out pattern is almost same in all the cases. They have a common partition wall having serially arranged cells on either side. These cells are hexagonal and fragile. The bee may have a separate comb as a brood chamber or may use the same hive as a brood chamber.
- This could be for collecting honey and beeswax, or for pollinating crops. About 85 per cent crops plants are cross-pollinated, and colonies of honeybees, placed in the field when the crop is in flowering stage, can set about the needed pollination; abundance of pollinators helps in early setting of seeds, resulting in early and a more uniform crop yield.
- Beekeeping requires less time, money and infrastructure investments. Honey and beeswax can be produced from an area of little agricultural value. The honey bee does not compete for resources with any other agricultural enterprise. Beekeeping have positive ecological consequences. Bees play an important role in the pollination of many flowering plants, thus increasing the yield of certain crops such as sunflower and various fruits. Honey is a delicious and highly nutritious food. By the traditional method of honey hunting many wild colonies of bees are destroyed. This can be prevented by raising bees in boxes and producing honey at home.
- Enemies of the bees that harm the colony in different ways are the Wax moths, Wasp, black ants, bee's eaters and King crow are common enemies of the honey bees comb and honey.

- Honey is produced by the bee and is of important medicinal value. It contains a variety of minerals e.g., Ca, Fe, Silica, Mg, Mn, K, Cl, S, Al, and phosphorus whereas amino acids, citric, formic, succinic, malic and acetic acids are also present in traces, pigments like Carotene, Xanthone and Anthocyanin and vitamin A, B complex and C are also reported in it. Besides all these enzymes like invertase, diastase are also found.
- Methods of Bee-Keeping: Indigenous methods and Modern method.
