

2017

ScienceDirect

Get Access

Export

Optical Fiber Technology

Volume 38, November 2017, Pages 136-141

Regular Articles

Fluoride contamination sensor based on optical fiber grating technology

Mangesh S. Jadhav <sup>a</sup>, Lata S. Laxmeshwar <sup>a</sup>, Jyoti F. Akki <sup>b</sup>, U. Raikar <sup>c</sup>, Jitendra Kumar <sup>d</sup>, Om Prakash <sup>d</sup>, U.S. Raikar <sup>a</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Department of Physics, Karnatak University, Dharwad 580003, Karnataka, India

<sup>b</sup> JSS College, Dharwad, Karnataka, India

<sup>c</sup> Department of CAE, Centre for Postgraduate studies, Visvesvaraya Technological University, Belagavi, Karnataka, India

<sup>d</sup> Laser System Engineering Division, Raja Ramanna Centre for Advanced Technology, Indore, MP, India

Received 20 January 2017, Revised 6 September 2017, Accepted 14 September 2017, Available online 21 September 2017.

Check for update

Show less

<https://doi.org/10.1016/j.yofte.2017.09.014>

Get rights and content

Highlights

- Fabrication of fiber Bragg grating (FBG) through Phase mask technique.
- Utilization of Copper vapor laser for the fabrication of fiber-grating sensors
- Designing of fiber grating chemical sensors – concentration sensors.
- Fluoride contaminant detection in drinking water collected from different regions.

Abstract

J.S.S. Banashankar
PRINCIPAL

J.S.S. Banashankar Arts, Commerce &
Shantikumar Gubbi Science College,
DHARWAD 580 004.

15